Scaling capacities to meet growing demand

We recently interacted with the management of Quality Power Electrical Equipments (QPOWER) at their plant in Sangli, Maharashtra. It manufactures high voltage electrical equipment and offers solutions for grid connectivity and energy transition. It operates across seven manufacturing facilities in India and Turkey, with installations up to 765kV in over 100 nations. It caters to industries like power utilities, oil and gas, cement, chemicals, renewables, automobiles, and steel. It is among the few global manufacturers of critical high voltage equipment for high voltage direct current (HVDC) networks and flexible alternating current transmission systems (FACTS). Its offerings include products like reactors, transformers, line traps, instrument transformers, capacitor banks, converters, harmonic filters, reactive power compensation systems, static var compensators (SVCs) and static synchronous compensators (STATCOMS). Its product portfolio is divided into power products/power quality systems, which contributed ~55%/ 45% in FY25, with a consolidated revenue/PAT of INR337cr/INR100cr. This stock is not rated.

Robust order book and revenue guidance

- Order book grew 45% QoQ to ~INR750cr in Q4FY25, with Mehru constituting ~47% at INR350cr. QPOWER/Mehru's order pipeline stands ~INR1,000cr/INR400cr. Its order intake was a bit constrained for the past few months as it was operating at full capacity. It expects robust order booking in six months as some capacities get commissioned.
- The management has guided a revenue of INR700–850cr in FY26, contingent on no further acquisitions. QPOWER has acquired companies almost every year, in line with its strategy of achieving 50% growth inorganically. It expects a PAT margin of 16–18% in FY26, with the management targeting ~20% in a few years.
- In FY25, PAT margin stood ~29.7%, driven by specialised reactors and other coil products. The indicated guidance is low given Mehru's lesser PAT margin at 12–13% and as it constitutes a major part of its current order book. The management is already on track to expand margins at Mehru.

Capacity expansions underway with a healthy demand outlook

- QPOWER is expanding its production facilities in Sangli, Cochin, and Bhiwadi. At Sangli, it has acquired ~10 acres of land close to its headquarters to set up a new facility. This will ramp up its production capacity by nearly 9x and is expected to be completed by Q2FY27. The Cochin facility is being expanded to double its production capacity. It is also set to expand capacity by 45% at its recent acquisition, Mehru Electrical & Mechanical Engineers Pvt (Mehru). Expansions at Cochin and Bhiwadi are expected to be completed by Q3FY26.
- Post expansion, at peak utilisation the company can clock annual revenues of INR2,000cr (~INR1500cr/INR500cr from QPOWER/Mehru).
- The promoters have extended a credit line of INR125cr, at a concessional rate, for capex so that cash of ~INR210cr can be set aside for future acquisitions. It expects to incur a capex of INR100cr in FY26.

Strategizing growth via acquisitions

QPOWER acquired Mehru for INR120cr from its IPO proceeds in February. It had previously acquired Endoks Enerji Anonim Sirketi, S&S Transformers & Accessories Pvt, and Electrical Power Equipment Company. The management is pursuing balanced growth through both organic and inorganic means, with a strong emphasis on expanding its HVDC and FACTS portfolio. It is seeking companies with lower valuations, with potential for margin improvement and operational efficiency through strategic intervention.

Valuation and view

QPOWER is making strong progress in broadening its product portfolio and is actively scouting for acquisitions. It has initiated capacity expansion across most facilities as the management maintains a confident outlook on sustained demand and industry tailwinds. At the CMP, the stock trades at a P/E ratio of 81x on a TTM basis. This stock is not rated.

Key acquisitions in the past

The management aims to grow by expanding its product portfolio via the acquisition route. It has a dedicated committee to evaluate potential targets, at cheap valuations, whose margin can significantly be scaled up by QPOWER over time. It is scouting for technological acquisitions in HVDC, FACTS, and critical power transmission domains. Promoters prefer to acquire the entire stake over a few years using promotor share swap agreements. Its group companies include:

- Mehru Electricals & Mechanical Engineers* Pvt: QPOWER acquired a 51% stake and funded this acquisition from its IPO proceeds. Mehru is engaged in the manufacture of high-voltage electrical equipment like switch gear panels, relay panels, stabilisers, capacitors, resistors, and thyristors, with specialisation in instrument transformers up to 500kV. It is expected to significantly contribute to QPOWER's expanding domestic and international business, with an order book exceeding ~INR350cr. It's production capacity in Bhiwadi, Rajasthan is being expanded, this includes installation of four new autoclaves and relocation of non-critical storage to a dedicated warehouse which is expected to increase capacity by ~45%. This capacity is expected to turn operational within five months. Post expansion, Mehru is projected to clock a revenue of INR500cr, making it a key part of QPOWER's growth strategy in the high-voltage equipment sector.
- Endoks Enerji Anonim Sirketi* (Endoks)*: It *a*cquired 51% stake in this Turkey-based company in 2011. Endoks specialises in mid-voltage power quality and grid stability solutions. It designs and manufactures STATCOMs and SVCs which provide voltage regulation, reactive power compensation, flicker mitigation, and load balancing. It is the only entity in Turkey that manufactures these products. Power quality systems constituted ~45% of consolidated revenue in FY25. It is expected to go down to ~25% as a percentage of consolidated revenue, given QPOWER's increased focus on expanding the power product segment.
- S&S Transformers & Accessories Pvt (S&S): QPOWER completely acquired this company in 2019. Based in Aluva, Kerala, S&S is engaged in the manufacture of medium voltage instrument transformers, specifically cast resin instrument transformers less than 33kV. Incorporated in 2009, it also dealt in related components like current transformers and potential transformers in both oil-immersed and dry-type formats, with product approvals from the Central Power Research Institute and listings with various electricity boards like the Kerala State Electricity Board.
- Nebeskie Labs: QPOWER recently raised its stake in Nebeskie Labs to 26%. This Chennai-based, technology-driven company is focused on developing technologies called edge computing and edge automation, which are IoT-based automation solutions for the power sector, aiming to enable unmanned and intelligent substations. Its core innovation involves embedding smart devices on high-voltage equipment to process data locally, apply machine learning, and support remote diagnostics while ensuring cybersecurity. With growing global demand for automated infrastructure, especially in regions facing skilled labour shortages, its solutions are positioned for future scalability. While it currently generates some revenue through energy management systems, its primary focus is on long-term R&D, supported by strategic investment from QPOWER.
- Electrical Power Equipment Company: This Bengaluru-based company, engaged in medium voltage power products, was formally taken over by QPOWER in February 2022.

Other income to normalise soon

Other income saw a notable increase to ~INR56cr in FY25 due to foreign exchange-linked gains and interest/investment income of ~INR44cr/~INR12cr. Turkish subsidiary Endoks operates in a highly inflationary environment. Contracts are signed in the Turkish Lira as the country restricts forex outflows, although payments are hedged to the dollar. Due to high inflation (~27%), there was a significant forex gain in FY25. This gain is operational in nature but as per applicable accounting norms this must be classified as other income. These norms are applicable only to nations having a cumulative inflation rate that exceeds 100% over the preceding three years. Hence, this anomaly is expected to normalise as inflation in Turkey declines. Apart from this, there is an interest income of ~INR12cr on cash and cash equivalents INR210cr of which ~INR75cr is held in Endoks.

Expanding Sangli facility capacity to 9x

QPOWER commenced construction at the state-of-the-art global coil factory in Sangli, which will rank among the largest facilities globally for producing air-core and oil-filled reactors. The project is being executed in collaboration with industry leaders such as Arwade Infrastructure, Kirby Building Systems, and ElectroMech Material Handling Systems (India). The plant will feature 44 cutting-edge winding lines and a dedicated high voltage testing laboratory, underscoring its focus on advanced manufacturing. Machinery to manufacture cables has been procured, with commissioning expected shortly as part of the factory's reverse integration strategy. Though this project is scheduled to be completed by Q2FY26, the management aims to complete it even earlier.
