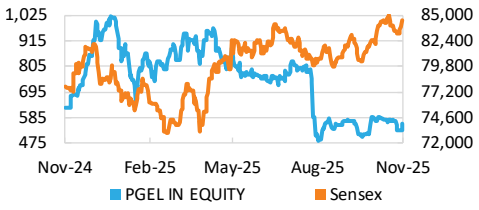
PRICE PERFORMANCE



Steady quarter amid headwinds

PGEL's revenue fell 2% YoY in Q2FY26, led by a 46% fall in RAC sales, partially offset by a scale-up in washing machine (+55% YoY) and Electronics (+57% YoY). EBITDA plunged 47% YoY on under-absorption of costs and forex loss (INR84mn versus forex gain of INR12mn). Management remain confident on meeting their earlier stated revenue/PAT guidance amid near-term pressure in RAC value chain.

We broadly maintain estimates. We value PGEL at 45x Dec-27E EPS and arrive at a Dec-26E TP of INR770 (INR710 earlier). At the CMP, the stock trades at 40.6x/30.7x FY27E/28E EPS. Maintain 'BUY' as we believe PGEL has significant potential to deliver industry-leading growth and profitability along with product expansions.

Muted showing amid weak demand; guidance intact

PGEL's consolidated revenue fell 2% YoY led by a 12% decrease in products segment (RAC/WM -45%/55% YoY) while PAT plunged 86% YoY due to under-absorption of cost and reduced margin. PGEL faced a weak Q2–Q3 due to muted demand, high channel inventory and order cancellations leading to adverse operating leverage. However, management reaffirmed their FY26 revenue/PAT guidance (INR57.5bn/INR3.1bn) supported by a healthy recovery in RAC driven by wallet share gains and gradual channel inventory normalisation. However, competitive intensity remains high across EMS players, brands and retailers amid a challenging industry environment.

Inventory normalisation in Q3; compressor uncertainty persists

PGEL continues to face elevated inventory levels following an extended build-up in Q4FY25 and subdued offtake in Q1–Q2FY26 due to weak summer demand and early monsoon. The company is currently carrying inventory of around INR13.6bn. Management expect inventory normalisation by Q3FY26, aided by restocking and improved secondary sales during the festive and winter season. The status on the planned compressor facility JV remains uncertain (earlier FY27) as the Chinese technology partner is yet to secure government approval in its country.

Tweak estimates; maintain 'BUY'

We believe PGEL has performed reasonably well given the industry backdrop. While the company retains its guidance, we believe there is modest downside risk, particularly given inflationary scenario. We are raising FY26E EPS for lower interest expense while retaining FY27E/28E EPS. We arrive at Dec-26E TP of INR770 (45x Dec-27E EPS versus INR710 based on 45x Sep-27E EPS); maintain 'BUY'. This remains one of our top picks in the EMS coverage universe.

Q2FY26 conference call: Key highlights

Guidance

- Management reaffirmed their confidence on achieving the FY26 revenue and profitability guidance, supported by firm and committed client orders for H2FY26. For FY26, standalone revenue was guided at INR57–58bn and consolidated at INR65.5–66.5bn (including Good worth Electronics). Furthermore, management expect ~15% YoY volume growth in the RAC business in FY26, versus flat volume growth for the industry.
- Management maintained their PAT guidance of INR3.1bn. Growth in H2FY26 shall be back-ended with a visible pickup from Dec–Mar led by inventory rebuild for new BEE norms and pre-summer demand.
- The washing machine business is likely to grow faster than the industry driven by wallet share gains and outsourcing trend.

Segmental highlights

- RAC
  - RAC revenue declined 45% YoY to INR1.31bn in Q2FY26 because of weak demand.
  - Industry volume growth is likely to be flattish in FY26, but PGEL is targeting ~15% volume growth driven by wallet share gains from existing clients and higher market share of partner brands.
  - Split RAC capacity is likely to increase from current 350,000 per month to 425,000 per month by Dec-25. Window RAC capacity (currently at 50,000 per month) remains unchanged
  - The company aims to reduce dependence on the AC segment over time through diversification into other product categories.
- Washing machines, refrigerators & air coolers
  - PGEL continues to see robust growth in washing machines, supported by increased outsourcing from brands and wallet share gains from existing clients.
  - The new washing machine plant in Greater Noida has been commissioned, increasing capacity to 200,000 units per month.
  - Management expect washing machines to contribute around 10% of FY25 revenue, rising to ~15% over the next two–three years.
  - The company currently has cooler capacity of 50k per month and plans to add another 25,000 units per month in the new Bhiwadi facility. Capacity expansion benefits shall be visible FY27 onwards.

Working capital and inventory

- Working capital pressures seen in the first half were mainly due to higher inventory and delayed receivables from some brands.
- The company mitigated the temporary liquidity challenge by discounting receivables and extending payables through buyer's credit, which had resulted in a one-time finance charge of around INR200mn in Q1.

- Although raw material costs (particularly copper and aluminium) have increased, finished goods inventory remains low. There is no concern whatsoever with respect to inventory from the BEE rating change perspective (to be effected from January 1, 2026).

Compressor facility

- The proposed compressor manufacturing joint venture with a Chinese partner is still awaiting approval from the Chinese government and, hence, progress is pending.
- Management reiterated that the project remains on the table, but there is no definitive timeline for commencement until the approvals and technology tie-ups are finalised.

Capex and working capital

- The company's FY25 capex is likely to be around INR7–7.5bn, primarily directed toward the refrigeration project in South India, as well as new facilities for washing machines, air conditioners, and coolers.
- Around INR1bn has been invested in the new washing machine plant at Greater Noida, INR2bn split between Supa and Dholpur for AC-related capex, and additional capex is being deployed in Bhiwadi (Salarpur) for air coolers tooling and specialised plastic injection moulding.
- The new Bhiwadi facility is aimed at improving manufacturing diversification and supporting new product verticals.
- Capex for the washing machine segment is largely complete while incremental capacity in the AC and cooler segments shall come online over FY26–27.

Others

- The plastic injection moulding and component business reported a small YoY decline in Q2 due to lower raw material prices (especially polymers), but on a first-half basis, it still grew about 10% YoY.
- The company's EV partnership with Speedo Mobility has been delayed, as the partner is yet to obtain ARAI approval for its motorcycles and has shifted focus to African markets.

Company Description

PG Electroplast Limited (PGEL) is the flagship company of the PG Group, which had started its journey in 1977. PG Electroplast, formally set up in 2003, is a leading, diversified Indian Electronic Manufacturing Services (EMS) provider.

PGEL specialises in Original Design Manufacturing (ODM), Original Equipment Manufacturing (OEM) and Plastic Injection Moulding, providing a range of solutions to India's consumer durables companies. It provides end-to-end solutions for final products such as air coolers, washing machines, air conditioners, LED TVs, etc. PGEL has 5,000-plus employees across 11 manufacturing units in Greater Noida (UP), Ahmednagar (MH), Bhiwadi (RJ) and Roorkee (UK). The company's wholly owned subsidiary PG Technoplast Private Limited (PGTL) manufactures air conditioners, coolers and components for various consumer durables.

Investment Theme

PGEL stands at the forefront of a dynamic transformation in the consumer durables sector, particularly in the booming room air conditioner (RAC) market. As India undergoes rapid urbanisation and a surge in disposable incomes, we reckon the demand for RACs shall burgeon from 11mn units in FY24E to 25mn units by FY29—implying a CAGR of ~18%. This backdrop positions PGEL as a key player ready to capture a significant share of this expanding market.

Given this conducive structural backdrop, what makes PGEL a truly compelling investment idea is its strategic evolution from a traditional plastic moulding business to a key OEM/ODM solutions provider for consumer durables companies in India. The company strategically expanded its capability to offer end-to-end solutions in RACs, WMs and air coolers. With strong government backing through the Production-Linked Incentive (PLI) scheme (committed investment of INR3.2bn) in RACs, PGEL's product segment posted a stellar 90% revenue CAGR over FY21–24, solidifying its market position in RAC and WMs.

The company has embraced innovation and cost efficiency (240bp margin improvement over FY21–24), leveraging its backward integration strategy (70% RACs BOM in-house) to maintain superior quality and control, while driving profitability.

Moreover, the Indian government's PLI scheme has been a game changer, encouraging companies, including PGEL, to capitalise on favourable government policies to boost local manufacturing. PGEL's joint venture with the Jaina Group in LED TVs and IT hardware is set to drive robust revenue growth and boost profitability. The expansion of electronics division adds a compelling new dimension to PGEL's high-growth story.

Key Risks

Competitive intensity: The consumer durables market is highly competitive, with established players and emerging brands vying for market share. PGEL may face intense competition, potentially impacting its pricing, market penetration and profitability.

Supply chain disruptions: Global supply chain disruptions—such as those caused by geopolitical events, natural disasters or component shortages—can impact PGEL's manufacturing operations, leading to delays, increased costs and potential revenue losses.
